I choose to run for Congress

I'm not content with the direction of our Nation's policies and actions. I am not happy about dumping trillions of dollars of debt upon the shoulders of my little grandchildren. I'm not happy having a President who won't discourage the use of torture on prisoners. I'm not happy paying for a war in the wrong country which does not protect us against terrorism. I'm not happy that this ill-advised war only makes us less safe from terrorism.

I'm not happy that our Nation's policies are wasting billions of dollars in Iraq when some of those same dollars could be used to build decent housing for Senior citizens or needy families in Hawaii. I'm not happy that the billions wasted in Iraq could be used to lessen the cost of a college or vocational education for our children and for adults seeking better jobs in America.

I will literally run my ideas around our islands so I won't need to take contributions from special interests. The high cost of elections and the need to take contributions from special interests will destroy our country if not corrected.

I'm running because at 10 o'clock on a Saturday night, someone in Congress has to remember the interests of the men and women who are still working in our hotels and restaurants and driving our city busses. They are working at that hour to support their families. Congress has ignored those families. That is why I choose to run.
